Dear Mr. Newman:

Your name was kindly supplied to me by Dr. V. Clain-Stefanelli of the Smithsonian Institution. I am hopeful that you will be able to assist me in the following request and I apologize in advance for troubling you.

I am currently engaged as a consultant to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation in the setting up of an exhibit of early banking history in the United States. The FDIC has acquired an interesting collection of memorabilia connected with the first and second Bank of the United States. In order to make the exhibit more complete, I would be interested in knowing whether you have in your collection any materials pertinent to the first Bank of the United States or the even-earlier Bank of North America (or Banks of New York, Maryland, and Massachusetts). Second, if you do have such items, would you consider lending them to the exhibition for a period of a few months?

I do hope that you will be able to help me in this regard. I shall be happy to supply you with any further information that you may desire regarding the exhibition.

Cordially yours,

George J. Viksnins

Dear Professor Viksnins:

Receipt is acknowledged of your letter of March 7, 1967 requesting items for an exhibit on behalf of the FDIC.

Original items relating to the first Bank of the United States and the Bank of North America can be furnished for a exhibit but only a few pieces are available to us for the purpose. Perhaps a check or so on each bank and a banknote issued by each bank would serve your purpose. I believe we also have an affidavit as to counterfeits of the Bank of the United States attached to the counterfeits themselves.

Incidentally, Smithsonian Institution has on loan from us a Bank of North America change note from 1789.

Would you be kind enough to advise us where this exhibit is to be held and what protection there will be with respect to it. We would also like to know whether the items which you have acquired relating to the First Bank of the United States overlap what we have suggested as being available.

We will be very pleased to be helpful.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Mr. Newman:

Thank you very much for your offer of help.

We would be very much interested in borrowing bank-notes issued by the first Bank of the United States and the Bank of North America. If you have any early notes issued by the second Bank of the U.S. -- say, around 1820 -- we would be appreciative of an opportunity to use these as well. Yes, the counterfeits and the affidavits would be of interest as well. We do have checks drawn on both the first and the second bank.

Dr. Kenneth Davies of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation will be in touch with you very soon in order to make the necessary arrangements. I think that it would be more proper for him to speak for the F.D.I.C. regarding protection and so forth.

Once again, I am personally most grateful.

Dear Mr. Newman:

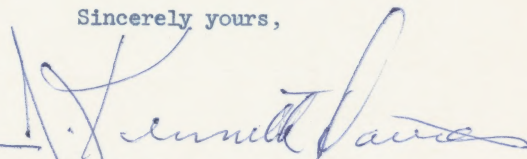

To follow up on our telephone conversation of March 23, I shall describe the security arrangements we have here to assure the safety of your materials. Our building is under 24-hour guard with an armed guard in the foyer of our building where our exhibit area is located. The actual material will be framed and bolted to the stand of the display case. In addition, we will place your materials in a locked display case with a plexiglass cover.

I shall let Dr. Viksnins of Georgetown University work out with you the exact items to be included.

Let me again extend our invitation to you to visit us should you find occasion to come to Washington. I would enjoy showing you the materials we have and having you see the display area either before we get into operation or after the exhibit itself opens. I would also like to have you as a guest to lunch.

Again, let me thank you for your kind assistance.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Professor Viksnins:

Although we received a telephone call from Dr. Kenneth Davies, of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, we have not as yet received a letter from him with respect to their desire to borrow material and an assurance that they will be in display cases with 24-hour guard service in the room. The material is ready to be sent.

Would you please do the necessary.

Dear Mr. Davies:

In accordance with the request made on your behalf by Professor Viksnins, and in accordance with your letter of March 27, 1967, we are very pleased to lend you, for exhibition, material relating to the Bank of North America and the Bank of the United States, for display.

We understand you have a nice collection of items already but do not have the early items which it is our pleasure to furnish.

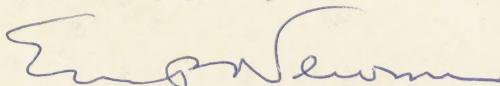

The items enclosed herewith are listed on the attached schedule and you have our permission to borrow from the Smithsonian Institution the Bank of North America threepence which they have on loan from us.

We suggest that you do not take any of the items out of the plastic envelopes in which they are contained as certain of the items are very brittle.

The writer appreciates your kind invitation to come to Washington but the probability of that taking place at the time of the exhibit is not great.

Please return the material after it has served your purpose.

Dear Mr. Davies:

Would you be kind enough to make up a list of the items which were sent to you and send the same to us. By inadvertence we forgot to make up the list here and rather than reconstruct it by memory it will be easier for you to copy it off the descriptions enclosed with each item.

In so far as insurance is concerned, that might be worthwhile but requires an evaluation. If Ben M. Douglas, a coin dealer in Washington, D. C., will give you an evaluation, I would very much appreciate it. Possibly you could bring them to his store after telephoning him (202 737 3026), so that he does not have to leave his store for the purpose.

The Bank of the United States check in French was valued at $100.00 by Norman Schultz, professional numismatist, of Salt Lake City.

I am sending a copy of this letter to Ben M. Douglas.
